Rather than love, than money, than fame,
give me truth.

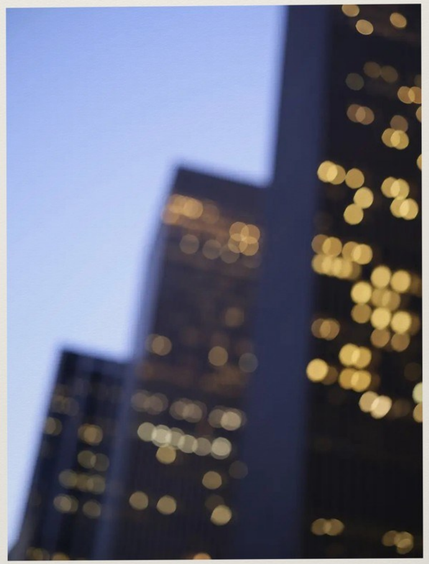

Antes que el amor, que el dinero, que la fama,
dame la verdad.

Henry David Thoreau, Walden

NY

Nueva York

Nueva York, una amante de brazos fríos que te aprieta el alma y te deja buscando calor en las esquinas. Lamentos y risas se ahogan en una soledad que avanza con prisa, un café en una mano y un sueño roto en la otra. Y aun así, seguimos viniendo. Buscando algo. Huyendo de algo. Atrapados en su promesa infinita.

New York

New York, a lover with cold arms who squeezes your soul and leaves you looking for warmth on street corners. Laments and laughter drown in a loneliness that rushes on, a coffee in one hand and a broken dream in the other. And still, we keep coming. Looking for something. Running from something. Caught in its endless promise.
